Local Conferences on Social Work with Groups are collaborative events around group work. They bring together professionals that work with social group work, university teachers, representatives of professional associations, institutional managers, users of services, students and researchers to locate and characterize initiatives of social group work, develop tools for professional practice with groups, share experiences and improve the knowledge and skills of all participants.

The conferences also aim to present the logic of the TSG+ project that promotes the initiative. This is the third conference to be held in Spain and the first in the city of Madrid.

Objectives:

- To share experiences of social group work.
- To develop, validate and share tools for working with groups.
- To self-evaluate competences for working with groups
- To attend and participate in interesting presentations about working with groups
- To Present the basic characteristics of the TSG+ project

This Conference has a space to present experiences of social group work. if you think you have a group work experience to be shared, this is your conference. Group work experiences will be reviewed and supported for their presentation by the scientific committee. Presentations will focus on professional or volunteer experiences involving the use of group work.
